From Graham's Magazine for Jan. 4243. THE BELFRY OF BRUGES. BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

In the market-place of Bruges stands the Belfry old and brown,

Thrice consumed and thrice re-builded, still it watches o'er the town; As the summer morn was breaking on that lofty tower I stood, And the world threw off the darkness like the weeds of widowhood.

Thick with towns and hamlets studded, and with streams and vapors gray, Like a shield embossed with silver, round and vast the landscape lay.

At my feet the city slumbered. From its chimnevs here and there Wreaths of snow-white smoke ascending, vanished ghost-like into air.

Not a sound rose from the city at that early morning hour. But I heard a heart of iron beating in that ancient tower.

From their nests beneath its rafters sank the swallows wild and high, And the world beneath me sleeping seemed more distant than the sky.

Then most musical and solemn, bringing back the olden times With their strange, unearthly changes, rang the melancholy chimes,

Like the psalms from some old cloister, when the Nues sing in the choir, And the great bell telled among them, like the chanting of a Friar.

Visions of the days departed, shadowy phantoms filled my brain! They who only live in history only seemed to wall the earth again! All the Foresters of Flanders, mighty Baldwin Bras-de-Fer, Lyderick du Bueq, and Crécy, Philip, Guy de Dam-pierre! I beheld the pageants splendid, that adorned those days of old,

Stately Dames, like queens attended, Knights who bore the Fleece of Gold, Lembard and Venetian Merchants with deep-laden argosies, Ministers from twenty nations-more than royal pomp and ease.

I beheld proud Maximilian, kneeling humbly or the ground: I beheld the gentle Mary, hunting with her haw!

and hound; And her lighted bridal-chamber, where a Duke slept with the Queen, And the armed guard around them, and a sword unsheathed between. I beheld the Flemish weavers, with the brave Count of Namurs, Marching home to Ghent and Bruges, from the Battle of the Spurs; Saw the fight at Minnewater, saw the White Hoods moving West, Saw great Artevelde, victorious, scale the Gelden Dragon's nest.* And again the whiskered Spaniard all the land with terror smote.

And again the wild alarum sounded from the tocsin's throat, Till the bell of Ghent responded, o'er lagoon and dike of sand.

"I am Roland! I am Roland! there is victory in the land !"t Then the sound of drums aroused me. The awakened city's roar Chased the phantoms I had summoned back into their grave once more.

Hours passed away like minutes; and before I was aware,

Lo, the shadow of the Belfry crossed the sun illumined square.

* The Golden Dragon, taken from the Church of St. So-phia in Constantinople in one of the Crusades, and places on the Belfry of Bruges, was afterwards transported to Ghent by Philip Van Artevelde, and still adorns the Belfry ription on the alarm bell at Ghent is " Mune naem is Rollind; als ik klep us er brant; en als ik lug is er vistorie in het landt."

Dinner to Gen. Cass.

We have already noticed the arrival of Gen. Cass in the United States, after a most successful and useful mission. Prior to his departure a splendid public dinner was given to him in Paris by his countrymen. His reply to a complimentary toss centains so many interesting points in relation to the past as well as future, that we submit it with great pleasure.

General Cass rose and said-I thank you, Mr. President, for the too kind sentiments you have been pleased to express towards me; and I thank my fellow citizens whose organ you have been, for the distinguished proof of their esteem which their presence and the occasion furnish me. It i a testimonial which I shall cherish as one of the proudest incidents of a life of almost forty year devoted to the public service, and chequered by viscissitudes in peace and war. This is its closing seene; and I now return, to pass what remains to me of time in comparative obscurity. I am we! aware that during my career I have accomplished little to deserve the consideration of my country men at heme, or the estimate you have been pleased to form of my services abroad. I can claim only the merit of good intentions, and that fortunately is a virtue so often found among our public men as to render its absence a signal cause of reproact while its profession is but the exercise of a duty Events to which you have just alluded, called upon me recently to interpose in the name of our country by a decisive measure, to prevent the establishment of a maritime pretension, which would have been as injurious to our interests in its exe cution as it was insulting to our honor in its enunciation. This attempt to gain the dominion of the seas has failed, as every attempt will, I trust. hereafter fail. An American representative encounters little hazard in asserting the just claims of his country. He will find a response, as I have done, in the hearts or his countrymen, and a reward in their approbation, which governments can neither give nor take away. We who have put the ocean between ourselves and our native land can, in my opinion, best appreciate the blessings which Providence has conferre upon our beloved country. Without seeking to decry the institutions of the old world, or to describe its condition as worse than it is, no American can fail to be struck by the immense superiority, in all the elements of human happiness which our confederated Republic presents over the eastern hemisphere. He who leaves our shores for a residence abroad, and does not return a wiser and a better citizen, will have locked upon life with as little wisdom as profit.

The questions, social and political, which agitate these long and densely populated regions, are questions of life and death. Antagonist principles are in contact, liable at any moment to break into fierce action, and which in their operation may and probably will affect the whole frame of socie Changes may come, which can only be pro duced by desperate struggles between those who have much and those who have nothing-between want and misery striving for existence, and wealth and power striving for defence. Happily for us, this state of things is unknown in our country .-We are indeed divided into parties; and this, perhaps, is one of the conditions of the preservation of freedom. But we have no organic destructions by which classes are created and maintained. We have no physical misery, nor political oppression. to array one pertion of the community against another, and to teach it to seek relief in the destruction of existing institutions. Our questions, indeed, are debated with a zeal which proves that all are in earnest, and that they result from honest differences of opinion respecting persons and principles; and sometimes, unfortunately, with a bitterness which calm patriotism may well deplore. But, after all, they pass away, leaving unharmed old regions of rank and distinction, to recall one old regions of rank and distinction, to recall the of the most beautiful traits of our whole system of Government, of which I am myself a practical situation; and that is, the perfect equality illustration; and that is, the perfect equality is Enquire at 126 Franklin street. Government, of which I am myself a practical which is the very foundation of our constitution; an equality which opens all the avenues of advancement to the whole community, and leaves success or failure to the exertions of each. That this principle should be dear to me, you will at once believe, when I tell you that it is now between of the Tribune, or call at 126 Nassau st. forty and fifty years since I crossed the mountains, en foot, without patronage and family connections, a young adventurer in that region, then so wild and solitary, now beaming with life and liberty. And whatever services I have been able to render and with whatever rowards I have been greatly over-paid, I owe all to this life-giving principleto this great test and preservative of our Republican Institutions.

Still, my friends, there is obviously one want in our country-one learned, which would do more to unite and render us happy, than any measure proposed by any party as a remedy for evils felt or anticipated-and that is, a just appreciation of our condition-a deep felt realization of the great blessings we enjoy-a conviction that the sun never shone upon a land more favored by Providence-and that all these subjects of discussion which divide us, important as they are, never can justify the fierce animosity to which they often give birth, but that they sink into insignificance, when placed in the balance against all God has done for us, to make us a happy people. This lesson is well learned abroad, by comparing what we have felt with what we see around us; and I trust we shall carry it back with us, as a precious acquisition, influencing our conduct and opinions for life. Permit me to conclude by offering you a sentiment, in which I am sure you will all cordially ioin:

Our Native Country !- Still nearer, the farther we are separated from it.

HORRORS OF A SHIPWRECK .- The preservation of the life of the sailor Fosdick, as given in our paper yesterday, was most wonderful. The following additional particulars were obtained from young Fosdick by Capt. Gurney, the pilot, who brought up the brig Shawmut. Capt. Kimball, it will be recollected, rescued Fosdick from the wreck. It appears from his statement that he remained 49 days on the wreck, with little or no food. A little flour was swashed up from the hold which they collected, wet with salt water, and dried in the sun and ate. It was known that there was a canister of salmon preserved in oil in the cabin. Fosdick dove down several times and succeeded in obtaining six, on which they lived for some time; after that nothing remained to support life. Of the seven that remained, (two being drowned in the forecastle when the Naiad upset.) it is remarkably that the most fleshy, and apparently the strongest, died first. Every thing was done by Fosdick to keep up the spirits of his companions, but they failed one after another, and as soon as hope fled, they yielded and died. When the weather was at all rough they were obliged to take to the foretop, and lash themselves, there to remain till it became calm.

They had now all perished but two-Fordick and a companion, who were in the top, one dark night, when it began to rain. Fosdick reached over to where his companion lay, to rouse him to obtain a few drops of water as it fell, but found him dead. In the morning he cut him loose and he fell into the sea. He then remained alone 6 days before he was taken off by Capt. Kimball .-Great credit is due, and should be awarded to Capt. Kimball, for the medical skill he disclaved in saving his life, for he was a mere skeleton, unable to stand or even speak. He took him in mediately to his cabin, put warm dry clothing upon nim, fed him moderately with warm rice water and gruel, by which means he was gradually restored to consciousness. Had he given him solid food, it would have been fatal. By his great caution and good management, he has saved a fellow being from a most horrid death-that of starvation.

On the arrival of the brig Capt, Gurney took him to his own house, where he remained till yesterday. He is now in comfertable quarters at the Seaman's Home in North-square, where those interested in his sad story can see him. He was caurely destitute, when Capt. Gurney made his case known in State-street, and in the insurance offices yesterday a purse of $50 was in a few mantes made up for him. Fosdick is 23 years of age, and belongs to the city of New-York, where we has a father and mother living. [Boston Transcript.
